

Julius Caesar

Later you follow the builders of the first great information system, the Roman roads, on which legionnaires march with Caesar into Gaul, Britain, Africa and Asia. Romans thirst for the blood of gladiators and cheer favourites at chariot races where drivers gamble lives for gold. Numerous replicas and museum pieces display the glory and the shame of the Roman republic, following the Greek example, where only the upper classes were free. The lower classes were as chattels and half the population were slaves.

Charioteer in Race

Rome in the time of Constantine